THE 5 STEP PROCESS BEHIND EVERY FACIAL RECOGNITION SEARCH

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not.

Join Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez as he explains the 5 Steps of the Facial Recognition Investigative Workflow. See firsthand how agencies nationwide are generating positive results with FaceSearch, Vigilant's facial recognition solution.

During Roger's tenure as a lead detective in the New York City Police Department's first dedicated facial recognition unit, he acquired the skills and first-hand experience in best practices for facial recognition in public safety. The success of this unit was driven by establishing a defined workflow which helped develop strong investigative leads and close cases faster.
